JIM CONLEY'S CASE MAY

BE REACHED WEDNESDAY

Alleged Accomplice of Leo M.

Frank Not Arraigned

Tues-

Day, as Was Expected

Jim Conley, the negro sweeper at the National Pencil factory, who was the principal witness against Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, was not arraigned on the charge of being an accessory after the fact Tuesday morning, as had been expected. Conley was brought to the court house with other prisoners, but Solicitor Dorsey announced to newspaper men that he would not be arraigned today on account of a press of business in the court.

It is believed Conley's case will be reached Wednesday. In the meantime, the solicitor is said to be investigating the law in the case to decide whether Conley should be tried on the indictment charging a felony or a misdemeanor. The solicitor's recommendation will probably be followed by the court.
